WHOLE NUMBER 604.

Posey Under 18th Amendment.
It was a nice day in October, Last September in July, Last September in July, The moon lay thick upon the ground, The mud shone in the sky, The flowers were singing sweetly, The birds were in full bloom, So I went into the cellar, To sweep an upstairs room, 'Twas time was Tuesday morning, On Wednesday, just at night, I saw a thousand miles away, A house just out of sight, The walls projected backwards, The front was round the back, It was midnight on the ocean, Not a street car was in sight, The sun was shining brightly, It rained all day that night, It was summer in the winter, And the rain was falling fast— A barefoot boy with shoes on, Stood sitting the grass, It was evening and the rising sun, Stood setting in the night, And every thing that I could see, Was hidden from my sight.

Refitting Pool Room.
Henry Cole and Will Steele are refitting the pool room in the basement of the Cole stone building in style. It has been repapered and a Colt light plant is being installed, and it is one of the most attractive places in town. Hot lunches are served and the pool tables are fine. For an hour of recreation give them a call.

FOR SALE—A registered Duroc-Jersey boar, 15 months old, sired by Highland King Defender 178349, H. N. Thompson at Jackson, Tenn. This boar is thoroughbred and certified copy of pedigree goes with him. One of the best boars in the State. Will sell for a reasonable price.

Lenox Saw Mill Company's Store Burns.
The store houses of the Lenox Saw Mill Company, at Lenox, burned Thursday night at about 9 o'clock, destroying practically all the big stock of merchandise and also the books and records of the company.

The fire is supposed to have originated from defective wiring of the electric wires leading to the office. The safe in which the books and records were kept was on the second floor and fell to the bottom and was so badly damaged that the fire got to the inside and destroyed the contents.

The loss is said to have been in the neighborhood of $100,000.00, and was partly covered by insurance. New buildings will be put up at once and the business continued as usual.

Accidental Killing at Wrigley.
Zettie, the ten year old son of W. R. Wrigley was accidentally killed by Wrigley Sunday. He and an older brother had gone fishing and taken a shot gun with them. The little fellow picked up the gun and asked his brother if he could shoot the fish. He set the gun down and it was discharged, the lead taking effect in his face, killing him instantly.

B. S. Stamper, of Sellers, was in town Monday on business, and informed us that his wife had been confined to her bed for several weeks with stomach trouble and was in a serious condition.

Eld. Alonzo Wright, of Wrigley, was in town Monday and paid the Courier office a pleasant call.

J. M. Sebastian, of Lexington, was a business visitor in town Monday.

Sam McKee Lewis, of Dehart, called in Monday while attending court here.

D. B. Wills, of Caney, was in town Tuesday on business and paid the Courier a pleasant call.

You can climb so high in the world, but you can never climb so high that you are above suspicion.

In keeping up the fires in this world we sometimes lose sight of the fact that we are burning up the wood.

Miss Cora Cottle, who has been visiting friends at Morehead and Wheelersburg, Ohio, has returned.

For the common everyday ills of mankind there is nothing to equal Tanlac, Edgar Cochran and Co.

Jas. L. Reynolds, of Wrigley, took his wife to Ashland last week to the hospital at that place for treatment.

W. M. Henry, of Liberty Road, was a business visitor in town Monday and called and renewed his subscription.

Joe Haney, of Cannel City, was in town Monday attending county court and renewed his subscription to the Courier.

Tanlac is purely vegetable and is made from the most beneficial roots, herbs and barks known to science. Edgar Cochran & Co.

If you find it hard to live within your income how do you expect your wife to get along without it? Better take out a life policy with Nickell & Sparks.

r. and Mrs. W. A. Bishop, of Blaine were in town shopping Monday and called at the Courier office and renewed their subscription.

Elder Merleth Crisp, of Wrigley, is reported to be very low with tuberculosis and is not expected to live through the week.

Keeping the middle of the road is well enough—if you have the wisdom to stand aside when the trouble teams are running wild.

Maybe some people do not like to save money, because a dollar always looks so much larger when it is the only one you have.

Banish that awful insomnia that troubles you every night. Let sleep be restful and refreshing. Tanlac does it.—Edgar Cochran & Co.

Misses Rooney and Rebecca Wells and Messrs. Curt Lacy and Holly Wright were visitors at the Courier office Tuesday afternoon.

Miss Susan Johnston, who has been visiting at Morehead, Ashland, Wheelersburg, Ohio, and Kenova, W. Va., has returned and reports a delightful visit.

J. W. Cunningham, foreman of the Jackson Times, and Fed White were in town a few days last week. Mr. White was looking for a Morgan county farm.

Aged Citizen Dies.

James Wright, aged 70, died at his home here on the 23rd ult., from stomach trouble and infirmities due to old age.

He was one of Morgan county's best citizens, and had lived on Elk Fork since his early manhood. He was born in Johnson county but moved to this county when quite young. He was a member of the Enterprise Baptist church and a Mason. He moved to West Liberty last summer.

He is survived by his widow and six children—one daughter and five sons: Mrs. O. B. Coffey, Elamton; Flen Wright, Elamton; Henry Wright, Redwine; John Wright, Jeptha; Holly Wright, West Liberty.

He was buried with Masonic honors in the Ferguson burying ground at his old home on Elk Fork. The community loses one of its best citizens in his passing.

J. Miles Nickell, of Daysboro, was in town Tuesday on business and called and renewed his subscription. Mr. Nickell has been suffering for the past year with heart trouble.

Mild Whit, an aged and honored of near Wrigley, died of home of Devil's Fork on the 18th, of flu. He was buried at Wrigley Sunday following.

I was praising my wife for her devotion and care in nursing me through a critical illness. "Well, Henry," she said, "who wants a widow with three children?" Provide insurance. Nickell & Sparks write it.

Mrs. Bruce McKenzie will go to Indianapolis Springs for treatment in a few days. She has been suffering for some time with lung trouble and will go there for the treatment that that institution offers.

Curren Nickell, of Pomp, was in town Monday and informed us that he was just recovering from the flu. He said that all of his family had had it and that for thirty days they were confined to their rooms.

RELIEF

Zoolus Prince, of Fleming county, passed through here last week with a bunch of mules to sell.

Misses Georgia Hill and Zella Kelly visited Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Bailey, of Silver Hill, Saturday and Sunday.

Van Williams is at Portsmouth on business this week.

The writer, Misses Maxie Brown and Verlie Hamilton, and Messrs. Earl Weaver, Earnest Brown, Isaac Salyers and Elsha Robbins were the guests of Mrs. Sarah Hill and family Sunday afternoon.

Henry Fyffe and Miss Greta Bailey, of Flat Gap, were married Feb. 17th. Henry is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Terve Fyffe, Greta the beautiful daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Bailey.

Clay Williams seems to be worse at this writing.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Johnson and children, of Red Bush, attended church at Paint Valley Sunday and were the guests of the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Calodron.

Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Hill returned last week from Ohio, where they had been visiting the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Dorton.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Holbrook have moved into the house with the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jackie Hamilton, to make a crop this year.

Rev. Don Webb attended a revival meeting at Flat Gap last week.

VIOLET.

GRASSY CREEK
Eld. J. C. Barber, of Stillwater, filled his regular appointment at Grassy Lick the 4th Saturday and Sunday.

The flu epidemic is still raging in this section and a great number are confined to their beds.

The death angel visited the home of Joe C. Gevedon, of Grassy Creek, on the 23rd inst., and took from him his beloved wife, Lilly B. Gevedon, after a long illness attended with much suffering. She was a daughter of F. M. and Annie who preceded her to the glory world. She leaves a husband, two children—Bessie Abbot and Hagar Nickell; two sisters—Mrs. E. C. Gevedon and Mrs. Inez McClure; and two brothers—J. Will Carter and F. Mitchell Carter. She was highly respected as a Christian lady by all who knew her. She was laid to rest in the Grassy Lick cemetery to await the resurrection morn. Elders J. R. Allen and W. F. Lykins engaged in a brief funeral service. Our sympathy is extended to the bereaved family.

We hope that our law-makers will reconsider the proposition to defer the bond issue to another session as is proposed by same and will pass a law to submit the voting for the bond issue at the next election, that we may have the roads while we are living.

NEW STORE.

Ladies' and Gent's Furnishings.

I have opened my store in the new brick building erected by J. H. Sebastian, on Main street.

I am endeavoring to carry a line of merchandise that you have heretofore been forced to go to the city to buy at a much higher price than I sell for.

My line of Nettleton shoes and Stetson hats will be in soon.

I especially invite your attention to my advertisements that will appear in the Courier in future issues. My ad will be different each week and will give you real news of the market in my line. It is my intention to talk to you through the Courier as though we were talking over the counter in my store.

I now most cordially invite you to come in and see and get acquainted with my line before doing your shopping.

Sincerely,
D. R. KEETON.

Dr. J. D. Whiteaker has demonstrated that he is a commanding figure and a force in the Kentucky Senate—one of the most influential leaders—and his friends are looking about for an opportunity to reward him further for his faithful service, and it is being urged that he be nominated for Congress from the Ninth District, and should he consent to this it is a foregone conclusion that he would win easily.

A GOOD CHANGE.

The Senate's change of the personell of the road commission from twelve to four is a good change, and the including of Mr. M. L. Conley, of Cannel City, on the commission is a wise provision. Mr. Conley is a graduate engineer and has had a great deal of experience in that line, and will know when bids for contracts are reasonable. And best of all he is absolutely incorruptible and will see that the State gets a dollar's worth of service for every dollar expended.

If the Senate will provide that the vote shall be taken on the bond issue this year the people will welcome the changes made in the House bill.

THE NORMAL SCHOOL LOCATION.

Some of the citizens of West Liberty are awake to the benefits that would be derived from the securing of the location of the Normal School here, but some are apathetic about the matter and seems to think that we have little chance to secure it.

West Liberty has every advantage in the matter. We are the most centrally located, have the best citizenship, can offer a magnificent campus site and Morgan county has the best school spirit of any county in the mountains.

All that is necessary for us to secure the location of the school is to make our advantages known to the committee who will select the site.

Lexington, Winchester, Paris, Mt. Sterling and all central Kentucky are interested in West Liberty securing the School. The editor of the Courier took the matter up with Senator Thos. A. Combs, of Lexington, and Senator Combs submitted the matter to the Board of Commerce of that city, and the Board endorsed West Liberty for the location. With the completion of the road to Paris West Liberty will be in close touch with all the central Kentucky towns, and these towns are commercially interested in our development. No other town in the mountains is so favorably located and the opening of the road will give to these central cities a volume of trade from this section that makes our interests mutual.

The Girl a Horse and a Dog railroad station—this either with or without Jennie's consent; I didn't know and forborne to ask—and the harlequin-faced dog was ready to trot at the pony's heels. But the blue-eyed maiden had sat herself up in her room, and I thought she wasn't going to come out and see me off.

At the final moment, however, after Beasley had already started his nag across the dump head, and I was about to climb into my saddle, she came to the cabin door, and was both furiously embarrassed and a bit breathless.

"Please—one minute!" she begged; and as I took my foot out of the stirrup: "Do you know what they have done with—"

"With Bullerton?" I helped out. "No, I don't know; but I suppose they've taken him on to the county seat at Copah with the others."

"Then—then—please let him go! If you refuse to prosecute—"

"Make yourself entirely easy," I broke in, a bit sourly, maybe. "I'll agree not to play the part of the dog in the manger."

"Thank you—so much!" she murmured; and then she backed away quickly and went in and on through to the kitchen, leaving me to follow Beasley, which I did, with the sour humor telling me that of all the puzzling, unaccountable things in a world of enigmas, a woman's vagaries were the least understandable. For, after all was said and done, and after all that had happened and been made apparent, it seemed to be palpably apparent that Jennie Twombly was still in love with the jeet.

CHAPTER XIX.

Angels, Desert and Urban.

Our stop-over in Angela, Friend Beasley's and mine, was of the shortest. Our business with Father William Duhlin was the merest travesty upon a trial at law, and was speedily concluded.

Since there would be no passenger train until afternoon, Beasley and I resumed our places in the freight's caboose, and in due time were set down in Brewster, the breezy little metropolis of Timanoni Park.

Here my captor and friend—appeared to be very much at home. He took me to the best hotel, where he read a station Buddy Fuller, the operator, ran out to hand me a telegram. Since it was too dark to see to read it, and I supposed, naturally, that it was nothing more important than a bid from some machinery firm anxious to supply our needs, I thought it might wait, stuck it into my pocket—and promptly forgot it!

"Still stickin' in your craw that you ain't a-goin' to pop the whip at Charley Bullerton?"

"It is," I answered.

"Well, now, why not?"

"Principally because I have promised somebody that I wouldn't prosecute."

"Not Hi Twombly; he'd never ast you to do anything like that."

"No; not Daddy Hiram."

He didn't press the matter any further, and we rode on in silence. As we approached the neighborhood of the mine, evidences of the forthputting activities began to manifest themselves.

Daddy Hiram met us at the door of his newly repaired cabin across the dump head and insisted upon taking care of the horses. Beasley and I washed up at the outdoor, bench-and-basin lavatory; and when we went in, Jennie had supper ready for us.

She didn't sit at table with us—from which I argued that she and her father had already eaten—and I thought she purposely avoided me; avoided meeting my eye, at least. I didn't wonder at it. Her position, as I had it figured out, was rather awkwardly anomalous. By this time, I had fully convinced myself that she was in love with Bullerton, and was probably engaged to be married to him; and that it was only her native honesty that had driven her to take sides against him in the struggle for the Cinnabar, prompting her to do the one thing which had knocked his nefarious scheme on the head—namely, the recording of my deed.

Knowing nothing but hard work, Daddy Hiram was running the deep-well pumps himself, or rather, taking the night shift on them; and about ten o'clock, just as I had made up my mind to go to bed and let the repairing activities take care of themselves, I saw Jennie going over to the boiler shed with a pot of freshly made coffee for her father. Here was my chance, I thought; so I waited and cornered her as she came back.

"Let's Have It Out, Jennie," I said.

"Let's have it out, Jennie," I said; which, I confess, was a sort of brutal way to begin on the woman I loved, and yet the only way if I was to go on remembering that she belonged to another man. "We can at least be good friends, can't we?"

"No," she returned, with a queer little twist of her pretty lips and a flash of the blue eyes. "I'm afraid we can't even be that—or those—any more, Mr. Broughton."

It was awkward for both of us, standing there before the open cabin door, and I pointed to the bench where Daddy Hiram was wont to smoke his evening pipe in good weather.

"Won't you sit down until we can sort of talk it out?" I begged.

"It's no use, whatever," she objected; nevertheless, she did sit down and let me sit beside her.

"I know just how distressed you must be," I began, "and perhaps I can fit a bit of the load from your shoulders. There will be no legal steps taken against your—against Charles Bullerton."

"Thank you," she said; just as short as that.

"And that isn't all," I went on. "After we get into the ore and have some real money to show for it, I'm going to make over a share in the Cinnabar to your father and put him in a position to do the right thing by you when you marry. And he'll do it; you know he'll do it!"

"How kind!" she murmured, looking straight out in front of her.

"It's no kindness; it's bare justice. Between you, you two have saved my legacy for me."

"I wish, now, it hadn't been saved!" she exclaimed, as vindictively as you please.

Truly, I thought, the ways of women are past finding out; or at least the way of a maid with a man is.

"Can't I say anything at all without putting my foot into it?" I asked in despair. "You break a man's back with a load of obligation one day, and one him lightly out of your young life the next! I haven't done anything to earn your—to earn the back of your hand, Jennie; or if I have, I don't know what it is!"

"You have committed the unpardonable sin," she accused coolly. "I don't wonder that Miss Randle took your ring off!"

I wasn't going to let the talk shift to Lisette; not if I knew it, and could help it.

"What is the unpardonable sin?" I asked.

"To misunderstand: to think a person capable of a thing when a person is not; to—just take it for granted that a person is guilty—oh—with a little stamp of her foot—I can't bear to talk about it!"

I guess it's a part of a man's equipment to be dense and sort of stupid—in his dealings with women, I mean. Slowly, so slowly that I thought the catch would never snap and hold, my fool mind crept back along the line, searching blindly for the point at which all this fiery indignation toward me had begun; back and still back to that moment of our deliverance—Daddy's and mine—at the shaft-house door, with this dear girl untwisting her arms from her father's neck, and with me saying, "I'm not hurt, either. Welcome home, Miss Twombly—or should I say, Mrs. Bullerton?"

"Jennie!" I gasped; "do you mean that you're not going to marry Charles Bullerton—that you never meant to?"

"Of course, I'm not!" she retorted, with a savage little out-thrust of the adorable chin. "But you thought so small of me that you simply took it for granted!"

I wagged my head in deepest humility. "I'm as the dust under your pretty feet, Jennie; please don't trample me too hard. Bullerton—that is—er—we had a scrap the next morning after you went away, you know, and I—well, he rather got the worst of it. And when I had him down and was trying to make him tell us where you were—even your father thought you'd gone off with him—he said you'd planned to go with him to get married, but that you had failed to show up at Atropia in time for the train."

"He told a lie, because that is the way he is made and he couldn't help it," she said simply, still as cool as a cucumber. "He said we were going to Atropia to get married, and I—I didn't say we weren't; I just let him talk and didn't say anything at all."

"Won't you tell me a bit more?" I begged.

"You don't deserve the least little bit, but I will. It began with the deed; your deed to the mine. One day, when you were over at the shaft-house, and had left your coat here in the cabin, I saw him take the deed from your pocket when he didn't know I was looking. He read it and put it back quickly when he heard me stirring in the other room. I knew it hadn't been recorded; you and Daddy had both spoken of that. I felt sure he'd take it again, and perhaps destroy it. At first, I thought I'd tell you or Daddy, or both of you. But I knew that would mean trouble."

"We were never very far from the fighting edge in those days," I admitted. "Bullerton had shown me the gun he always carried under his arm, and had told me what to expect in case I were foolish enough to lose my temper."

"I know," she nodded. "He killed a man once; it was when I was a little girl and we were living in Cripple Creek. He was acquitted on the plea of self-defense. So I didn't dare say anything to you or to Daddy. What I did was to steal your deed myself, when I had a chance. Daddy has some blank forms just like it, and I sat up one night in my room and made a copy. It wasn't a very good copy—your grandfather's handwriting was awfully hard to imitate. Besides, I didn't have any notarial seal. But I thought it might do for—something to be stolen. Then I hid the real deed and put the copy back in the envelope in your pocket."

"And Bullerton finally stole it, just as you thought he would," I put in.

"He did. You are dreadfully careless with your things; you are always leaving your coat around, just where you happen to take it off. I knew then that the next thing to be done was to get your deed recorded quickly. He—he was urging me every day to run away with him, and I was afraid to tell him how much I despised him; afraid he'd take it out on you and Daddy. So I just let him go on and talk and believe what he pleased. Of course, he wanted to ride with me the morning we went away, but after we got down the road a piece, I made an excuse to go on ahead by another trail."

"That much of what he told your father and me—when we were having the scrap—was true. He said you went on ahead."

"I didn't go to Atropia, as he expected me to," she continued calmly. "I took the old Haversack trail across the mountain to Greaser siding. I knew that the Copah train would stop there on the side-track. When I got as far as the Haversack I thought I heard somebody following me. I was scared and didn't know what to do. I was afraid my copying of the deed had been discovered and that the original would be taken away from me, so I hurried to hide the real deed. The old Haversack tunnel seemed to be a good place, but while I was in there Barney began to bark, and I looked out and saw that the noise I had heard had been made by a stray cow from one of the foothill ranches. So I remounted and rode on to catch the train to Copah. At Greaser siding I tried to make Barney lead the pony home, and Barney tried his best to do it. But Winkle wanted to graze, and I had to go off and leave them when the train came. That's all, I think, except that I had to wait two days at my cousin's in Copah before I could get the deed back from the recorder's office. They were awfully slow about it."

"It isn't quite all," I amended. "You haven't told me how you happened to come back with Beasley and his posse."

"That was just a coincidence. I reached Atropia on the early morning train and met Mr. Beasley and his men just as they were starting up the mountain. Cousin Buddy Fuller had told me how he had telegraphed to Angela for Mr. Beasley, and I was scared to death, of course, because I knew what it meant. So I borrowed the Haggerty's pony and came along with the posse."

There was silence for a little time; such silence as the clattering and hammering of the carpenters and steam-fitters permitted. Then I said: "And when you got here, the first thing I did was to call you 'Mrs. Bullerton'. I don't blame you for not being honest; I don't."

"It was worse than a crime," she averred solemnly; "it was a blunder. What made you do it?"

"Partly because I was a jealous fool; but mostly because I was sore and sorry and disappointed. I thought Bullerton had beaten me to it."

"No," she said quite soberly; "it was Miss Randle who beat you to it." I gasped. There were tremendous possibilities in that cool answer of hers; prodigious possibilities.

"But say!" I burst out; "didn't I tell you that Lisette had pushed me overboard long ago?"

"I know. She was sensible enough to see that you and she couldn't live on nothing a year. But now that you are rich, or are going to be—I'm sure you are not going to be less generous than she was. What if she did take your ring off in a moment of discouragement, and knowing that you couldn't buy her hats? You can be very sure she put it on again as soon as your back was turned."

There we were; no sooner over one hurdle before another and a higher one must jump up. I groaned and thrust my hands into my pockets. A paper rustled and I drew it out. It was the telegram Buddy Fuller had handed me, still unread. I opened it half absently, holding it down so that the glow of the nearest flare fell upon the writing. Then I gave a little yelp, swallowed hard two or three times and nearly choked doing it, and read the thing again. After all of which I said, as calmly as I could:

"But, in spite of all that I had told you about Lisette, you asked me once to kiss you."

"Is—in it quite nice of you to remind me of it?" she inquired reproachfully.

"It wouldn't be—in ordinary circumstances; it would be beastly. But listen, Jennie; haven't you been mad clear through, sometimes, in reading a story, to have a coincidence ring in on you when you know perfectly well that the thing couldn't possibly have happened so pat in the nick of time?"

"I suppose I have; yes."

"Well, don't ever let it disturb you again. Because the real thing is a lot more wonderful and unbelievable, you know. Listen to this: It's a wire from my cousin, Percy; the one who sent me out into the wide, wide world to look for a girl, a horse and a dog, and who is the only human being outside of Colorado who knows where I am likely to be reached by telegraph. He is in Boston, and this is what he says: 'Recalled home when we reached Honolulu, out-bound. Lisette and I were married today. Congratulate us.'"

For a minute there was a breathless sort of pause, and I broke it.

"Jennie, dear, was it just common honesty and good faith that made you take all these chances, with the deed, and with Bullerton?"

"Yes, I'm commonly honest," said the small voice at my shoulder.

"Bullerton is a shrewd, smart fellow," I went on. "I'll venture to say that he never made such a bonehead break as I did the morning you came back. You must think something of him or you wouldn't have asked me not to prosecute him for trying to murder your father and me."

She looked down at her pretty feet, which were crossed.

"I think—a little something—of myself," she said, with small breathings between the words. "I owed myself that much, didn't you think? If I didn't decide him outright, I'm afraid I did let him deceive himself. So that made me responsible, in a way, and I couldn't let you send him to jail, could I?"

"But what about me? Are you going to send me to a worse place than any jail—for that is what the whole wide world is going to be to me without you, Jennie, dear."

Her answer was just like her: She turned and put her face to me and said, "Kiss me again, Stannie." And though all the carpenters on the job were looking on, as I suppose they were, by this time, I took her in my arms.

It was a short spasm; it sort of had to be in the public circumstances. When it was over, I folded Percy's telegram, took out my pencil, and with the dear girl looking on, printed my reply on what was left of the message blank. This is what I said:

"The same to you. Have found the G. H. and the D., and Miss Jennie Twombly and I are to be married as soon as we can find a minister. Incidentally, I have learned how to work. Hope it will be a comfort to you. To Grandfather Jasper—if he is where he can hear of it—and to all concerned."

"STANNIE"

The Colt Lighting, Cooking and Ironing plant which I had installed in my home last spring has given perfect satisfaction in every detail, and gives the best of light at all times.
It is simple and easy to operate and has never given me any trouble of any kind. I gladly recommend it to any one who desires the cheapest and the best light in their homes.

REN F. NICKELL

Seed of cowpeas and soy beans is so cheap this year that every farmer is urged to plant a large part of his corn to soy beans, and sow as much land as possible in cowpeas for hay or turning under. At present soy beans can be obtained in western Kentucky as low as $1.50 per bushel, and cowpeas at southern points as low as 1.75 per bushel.

"THERE IT IS AGAIN!"

That fluttering sensation means heart trouble!
Short breath; smothering sensations; inability to lie on the left side; pain in the heart, left side or between the shoulders;
swollen feet and ankles;
are danger signals.

Dr. Miles'

Heart Treatment

has been used with wonderful success in all functional heart troubles for more than thirty years. Try a
